Why I Left Mainstream Social Media (And Found Peace Here)

For eight years, I scrolled through Instagram, Facebook, and Twitter. At first, it was fun – connecting with friends, seeing their photos, sharing moments. But slowly, something changed.

My feed became filled with ads. Every third post was a product I didn't ask for. Then came the algorithm. I stopped seeing my best friend's posts. Instead, the app showed me what it thought I wanted. I felt like I lost control.

I tried muting, blocking, and reporting. Nothing worked. The ads kept coming. The algorithm kept guessing. I felt anxious every time I opened the app.

Then I found Social Connect.

A social media app with no ads. No algorithm. Just a simple, chronological feed of people I actually care about. I can join small communities – art, gaming, sustainability – without being bombarded by sponsored content.

My data stays mine. No tracking. No selling. No hidden fees.

After one week of using Social Connect, I realized what I had been missing: peace. I scroll because I want to, not because an algorithm tricks me. I see my friends, not products.

If you are tired of the noise, try Social Connect. Download it today. Your feed will thank you.
